

SASKATCHEWAN ADVANCES NUCLEAR POWER TO SUPPORT LONG-TERM ENERGY SECURITY

What a pleasure to join our Premier and several colleagues Tuesday in Saskatoon as Saskatchewan takes an important step toward a stronger, more secure energy future.

Our government's new nuclear plan sets a goal of at least 2,600 MW of nuclear power by 2050, helping ensure reliable and affordable electricity for growing communities, industries and major investments.

The plan includes exploring large nuclear reactors in northwest Saskatchewan, advancing SMR development near Estevan, and building on the province's growing nuclear expertise, skilled workforce and world-class uranium resources.

Premier Scott Moe's strong and steady leadership is helping turn Saskatchewan's energy potential into opportunity, strengthening energy security, attracting investment and creating jobs for generations to come. Saskatchewan has the resources, people and opportunity to be a leader in nuclear energy!

See the news release below.

The Government of Saskatchewan is advancing nuclear power as a central component of the province's commitment to long-term energy security and economic growth, releasing Delivering Energy Security Through Nuclear Power. The document supplements the Saskatchewan First Energy Security Strategy and Supply Plan and outlines the province's next steps toward a nuclear future.

This plan establishes a nuclear power production goal of at least 2,600 megawatts (MW) by 2050, ensuring Saskatchewan has the reliable, affordable and secure electricity needed to support a growing population, expanding industries and major investment projects.

“Reliable, affordable power is essential for Saskatchewan families to thrive and for businesses and communities to grow,” Premier Scott Moe said. “With our world-class uranium resources, skilled workforce and growing nuclear expertise, Saskatchewan has everything we need to be a global leader in nuclear energy. This ambitious plan turns that potential into action - strengthening our energy security, attracting investment, and building a strong nuclear future right here at home.”

Today is about more than a major energy project. It is about building the future of Saskatchewan. It is about energy security. It is about good careers and strong families.

YOUR LEGISLATIVE REPORT

As our population grows and new opportunities emerge, our government remains focused on creating the conditions that support long-term prosperity, strong communities and a secure future for Saskatchewan families. Recent announcements demonstrate the confidence investors, businesses and industries have in our province and highlight the work being done to support growth for generations to come.

A major milestone was reached this week with the release of Saskatchewan's nuclear power strategy, which establishes a goal of producing at least 2,600 megawatts of nuclear-generated electricity by 2050. The plan includes development of large-scale nuclear reactors in northwest Saskatchewan and continued work toward Small Modular Reactor deployment near Estevan. Reliable and affordable electricity will be essential to support population growth, industrial expansion and major investment projects. Saskatchewan is well positioned to become a leader in nuclear energy given our world-class uranium resources, skilled workforce and growing expertise in the sector.

Saskatchewan's role as a global supplier of essential resources continues to grow through investments that expand access to international markets. A recently announced $500 million Canpotex investment at Neptune Bulk Terminals in the Port of Vancouver will strengthen export capacity for Saskatchewan potash and support long-term economic growth. As home to the world's largest potash reserves, Saskatchewan helps feed a growing world while creating jobs and opportunities here at home. Potash exports reached $9 billion in 2025, underscoring the industry's importance to our province's economy.

Supporting growth also requires continued investment in infrastructure. Our government is strengthening partnerships with industry leaders and local suppliers to ensure major projects are delivered efficiently and effectively. Saskatchewan's Growth Plan includes a commitment to invest $30 billion in infrastructure by 2030, helping communities keep pace with a growing population and expanding economy. During the 2025-26 fiscal year, more than 94 per cent of government procurement spending was awarded to Saskatchewan-based companies, supporting local businesses and jobs across the province.

That growth is also being reflected in Saskatchewan's housing sector. According to the latest information from the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, housing starts increased by 65.5 per cent in August compared to the same month last year, ranking first among all provinces. Multi-unit housing construction more than doubled during that period, helping address demand created by record investment, job creation and population growth. Saskatchewan has now ranked first or second nationally in housing start growth for three consecutive months, demonstrating the strength of our construction sector and continued confidence in our province's future.

Alongside measures to increase housing supply, our government continues to support Saskatchewan residents who may need additional help. In North Battleford, a new supportive housing project is underway that will provide eight housing units for individuals experiencing homelessness. Developed in partnership with the Battlefords Indian Métis Friendship Centre, the project will offer safe housing, culturally appropriate supports and access to services that help individuals build stable, successful futures. This initiative is part of our broader commitment to increasing affordable housing and supporting vulnerable residents throughout Saskatchewan.

Our government is planning for the future while delivering results today. From strengthening energy security and expanding export opportunities to building housing and critical infrastructure, Saskatchewan continues to create the conditions for long-term growth and prosperity. With responsible planning and strategic investment, we are ensuring Saskatchewan remains one of the best places in Canada to live, work, raise a family and build a business.

SASKATCHEWAN POTASH

Premier Scott Moe, alongside Canpotex President and CEO Gordon McKenzie, attended the groundbreaking event of a new infrastructure project from Canpotex, the Saskatchewan-based potash supplier. The ceremony kicks off a $500 million investment at the Neptune Bulk Terminals, which will include replacing and refurbishing equipment, bolstering Saskatchewan's supply chain for potash exports.

“Saskatchewan potash helps feed a growing world, and this investment in shipping capacity, made possible by Canpotex, will help deliver more of this vital nutrient to the people who need it,” Moe said. “By moving more Saskatchewan potash to international markets, this project will create new opportunities and support good jobs and economic growth in our province as well as across Canada. This expansion will strengthen global food security and reinforce Saskatchewan's position as the world's leading potash producer and a trusted, secure, reliable and ethical supplier."

"Saskatchewan is where this story starts," McKenzie said. "Today's investment at Neptune means we will be able to reliably export Saskatchewan potash through the Port of Vancouver to farmers overseas for decades to come."

Based in Saskatoon, Canpotex markets and delivers potash produced by Mosaic and Nutrien, the two largest Saskatchewan potash companies. For over 50 years, Canpotex has marketed and delivered high-quality, Canadian potash to more than 40 overseas countries. Over the company's lifetime, it has sold and shipped 325 million metric tonnes of potash to millions of farmers, helping the world grow more food.

It was a pleasure to attend the announcement at the Saskatchewan Indian Institute of Technologies (SIIT) as Minister of Advanced Education.

The expansion of the Saskatchewan Aviation Learning Centre is an important investment in students, Indigenous education and Saskatchewan's economy. It will provide more learners with access to hands-on training closer to home while helping meet the growing demand for aircraft maintenance engineers across Saskatchewan and Canada.

SUPPORTING OUR VETERANS SASKATCHEWAN VETERANS SERVICE CLUB SUPPORT PROGRAM BENEFITS RIVER VALLEY RESILIENCE RETREAT

On Sunday, September 27, Parks, Culture and Sport Minister Alana Ross, along with local MLAs joined Royal Canadian Legion members and community partners at the River Valley Resilience Retreat (RVRR) facility south of Prince Albert to celebrate the completion of several projects funded in part through the Saskatchewan Veterans Service Club Support Program.

The Government of Saskatchewan has provided $145,000 to River Valley Resilience Retreat (RVRR) since 2021-22 to support facility improvements benefiting veterans, first responders and their families at its permanent facility near St. Louis, Saskatchewan, which has included accessibility renovations and building construction.

This year, 64 Royal Canadian Legion branches, Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans (ANAVETS) units and other registered non-profit veterans organizations across Saskatchewan received $1.45 million through the program. For the third consecutive year, the program was fully subscribed in a single intake.

“Our veterans service clubs and organizations like River Valley Resilience Retreat do important work supporting veterans and their families,” Ross said.

“It is rewarding to see how this funding is helping improve facilities and support the work RVRR is doing for veterans, their families and others in the community.”
